

Alex's friend Jay spends a lot of time playing games online. Sometimes Jay doesn't get his homework finished because he spends too much time online.

What could Jay do to make sure he doesn't spend too much time playing games?

Jay has his computer in his bedroom. To his friend Alex this seems really cool. However, Jay often spends too much time online and sometimes goes on sites that aren't meant for kids his age.

What could Jay's parents do about this?

Jay and Alex are friends with some older kids from their school. Their older friends have been encouraging them to play games meant for older kids. The games are really cool but Jay and Alex know that they're really not old enough to be on them.

What should Jay and Alex do?

Jay was playing a game online and he accidentally pressed a key that took him to a dodgy website. This made him feel uncomfortable and worried.

What could Jay do?

Alex and Jay have found a cool games website that asks them to sign-up before they start playing. The site asks them to enter their full names, postcode, birthday, parent's payment (credit card) details, and email address. This seems like a lot of information just to play a game.

What should Alex and Jay do?